To Whom It May Concern;

I have been outraged at the seemingly weak willed and weak minded actions my United States Government Justice Department is taking in the Microsoft antitrust actions. I have personally worked for companies and been exposed to Microsoft both on the business realm and with product related issues as a developer and as a user. I have worked for start-up companies which were damaged by Microsoft's business actions. And now I see my Government throwing in the towel after my fighter has scored a major blow to the opponent.

The current proposed settlement to the Microsoft Antitrust case is a sham. It is amazing that my government would even consider this as a just result.

As an example, the consideration that the implied enforcement of this settlement will be overseen and ensured by a Microsoft employee is ludicrous. This is equivalent to catching a fox eating a chicken in your hen house and then leaving the fox's little brother to insure it does not happen again, WHILE LETTING THE OFFENDING FOX STAY IN THE HEN HOUSE.

What are you thinking at the Justice Department? Have you all given up? Have you sold out? If so then save us taxpayers a lot of money, resign from your posts and go home. The vacuum you leave will be filled, hopefully with someone more interested in working for the good of the citizens.
